So impressed by @ZachWahls who I met at the 2012 Dem convention. He's going to be a great leader for our country.

Iowa Starting Line @IAStartingLine
Congrats to @ZachWahls, who has won the SD 37 primary. He will enter the Iowa Senate as the youngest member by far - just 26 years old (only two or three precincts are still out)

The Dems just flipped another seat in Missouri, a State Senate District Trump won in 2016 by 5%, the Dem tonight won by 20%. For all those saying blue wave was dwindling, this is evidence to contrary. 42nd red to blue flip since Trump elected.

The Russian Witch Hunt Hoax continues, all because Jeff Sessions didn't tell me he was going to recuse himself...I would have quickly picked someone else. So much time and money wasted, so many lives ruined...and Sessions knew better than most that there was No Collusion!

No, it is NOT a generic ballot poll. It's a poll of 64 districts considered competitive or likely to be. So out of that sample are the numerous CD's that vote over+30 Dem (more than vote +30 Repub). Many of these 64 CDs are VERY Repub, few are marginally Dem. +5 in these=Dem wave twitter.com/sahilkapur/sta...

Voters in #39: the differences between Dems are infinitesimal compared to the differences between any of them and the GOP as well as GOP House and Dem House.

Dave Wasserman @Redistrict
In #CA39, Dem voters seem genuinely conflicted between two unsympathetic millionaire front-runners (Cisneros/Thorburn) and others w/ less $$ (Tran/Jammal). Gives GOPers (Kim, Nelson, maybe Huff) a chance to finish in top two in a CD Trump lost by 8%.

Democrats' greatest top-two shutout risk in CA might now be #CA39, inching past #CA48 (where Baugh (R) has faded). And Harkey (R) surge in #CA49 gives Dems (Applegate, Levin or Jacobs) a better chance of moving on there.

I just need to say how absolutely lunatic it is that Trump dumps on and disrespects Canada and Europe and is planning to roll out a red carpet for Putin. Putin's investment in Trump's election best in his life.

Joy apologized last December for her old blog posts. In April 2018, she did NOT apologize for new posts found on her blog but, instead, claimed that someone had hacked her account. This claim remains unsubstantiated and there was NO apology given in reference to those posts.

1. Specifically identified those blog posts which she originally claimed were not hers & were a result of hacking
2. Admitted that she did indeed write the posts identified in #1
3. Apologized specifically for those posts identified in #1

Unfortunately I think that moment is already locked in place as the SCOTUS tragedy of Bush v Gore of 2000. Obama just staunched the bleeding for 8 years. But what takes a decade to build can be brought down in mere moments, as we learned the hard way in 2001, 2007/8, 2017/18...

Very accurate article. I'm a CA-48 resident.
Two wild card elements at work:
- On the D side, votes will go to candidates that could have gone to a D front-runner. The names of "Michael Kotick" and "Laura Oatman" will appear on the ballot, but those two endorsed Rouda.

Why Dems are sweating Orange County: In open Royce seat (39), R's lead 46/34 in returned ballots & 53% are 65+ (just 7% are under 34). In Rohrabacher seat (48), Rs lead 46/35 & 57% ■ 65+ (6% < 34)If those gaps persist, Ds will need big election day push to avoid getting shut out

Did Trump delete his tweet after the world told him it was actually his staffer who said it? If not, then he knows it's wrong and keep it up. Seems to me clear it was an intentional lie then. Why folks are getting metaphysical about this? Why presume he didn't know?

It's just as metaphysical to determine someone is lying as isn't lying. Maggie Haberman prefers only the one, gladly reading Trump's mind to find cases where he didn't mean to lie but not reading his mind to disclose an intentional lie.

It's a weird world in which we have a 24 hour raging debate in which some group of the public demands that lies be called lies and some journalists react that they should be called intentional mistruths or some such nonsense. It used to be that these roles were reversed.

Neera Tanden

Perhaps we should be hopeful about those in the public demanding lies be called lies. And others can determine what it should make us think about journalism today.

It's not just the word lies - it's every time a member of the non-Russia/Trump-infected press uses enabling language. Every time a reporter goes on TV to tell us how Trump "feels misunderstood" or shares a SHS recipe or does any small thing to normalize, we are in greater peril.

Gaslighting is saying #Hillary was just using email when she treated our country's secrets like wedding plans and yoga routines

And even more complete BS is trying to convince us Hillary actually did yoga

Glad to be one of these people.

Trump.

Mr. Penn declined to comment on Monday, but his migration away from the Clinton camp has been a long time coming. More center-right than most advisers in the Clinton orbit, he long battled with more liberal aides and eventually stepped down from his post as chief strategist for Mrs. Clinton's 2008 campaign amid bitter internal feuds driven by clashes over personality and strategy as well as ideology.

A New York native who was captivated by numbers since childhood and parlayed a Harvard education to become a top Democratic pollster, Mr. Penn, 64, was one

It's highly irregular but Trump blinked in that meeting. He could've demanded a new e-ghazi style investigation of the FBI. Instead, he didn't demand anything more than what Rosenstein offered, which was nothing, and it opened the door for Dems to get involved in the intel share.

The Republicans have a MAJOR financial incentive to prop Trump up. It's all about the money - always the money, not about the well being of the American people.

Honestly wondering....is there a way that Trump hasn't acted guilty of colluding with the Russians?

I think of all the corruption in this Administration and the lack of any accountability. And I realize that it will take a gargantuan effort for real accountability. Maybe we should just let him keep the plane if he's willing to leave office voluntarily. 😃

I know this is a bit overused around here: but can you imagine if Barack Obama's relatives were meeting with Russians to get dirt on Romney, and there's a mystery 4 minute call that no one explains? Don't you think the pitchforks would be out by a lot of people?

That the bribe didn't work because of career DOJ doesn't mean a bribe wasn't offered or taken.

> Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
> Why doesn't the Fake News Media state that the Trump Administration's Anti-Trust Division has been, and is, opposed to the AT&T purchase of Time Warner in a currently ongoing Trial. Such a disgrace in reporting!

These are all important topics, but I am surprised to see that rural issues appear to be absent - perhaps because CAP doesn't have a policy expert in this area. It is hard to learn the lessons of 2016 if we keep overlooking Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, etc.

My parents immigrated from India; we had some family troubles and ended up on welfare, using food stamps and section 8 housing for a few years. We got back on our feet in a few years, and today, my family, including my brother and I, have paid it forward. #itcouldbeme

Why people hate Washington: because DC thinks is routine business, normal people see as bribery.

> Steadman™ @AsteadWesley

If your Administration lies to the press and the public all the time, I'm honestly not sure what the purpose of the briefing and credentials are.

Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
The Fake News is working overtime. Just reported that, despite the tremendous success we are having with the economy & all things else, 91% of the Network News about me is negative (Fake). Why do we work so hard in working with the media when it is corrupt? Take away credentials?

you are trying to make this about one race or another or one candidate or another. I am asking: Who determines what is "practical?" The voters? Or the people who are determining who even gets to debate? lets have those debates and then decide.

and if you see @neeratanden's original tweet, her formulation was about what was "reasonable" and what was "practical." And those are coded beltway words that actual diminish choices. Sorry... I wish Obama had been a bit less "reasonable" and a bit more bold, for example.

But I'm sure Neera doesn't know of anyone who fits that description, and definitely never worked on that exact campaign, because she's acting as if an example doesn't exist, and there's no way she would be disingenuous just to push a "we must settle for less" narrative...

Yeah it is. This honest crook got 42 percent of the vote against the black guy in 2012.

I dont feel sorry for folks like this.

Correctional Institution in Texarkana, Texas, took 41 percent of the vote in West Virginia's Democratic primary Tuesday night — 72,000 votes to Obama's 106,000. He would qualify for convention delegates, if anyone had signed up to be a Judd delegate. (No one did.)

How did Judd get so many votes?

It's likely not his past careers as a superhero and religious leader. Or his passionate FEC report ramblings. Simply put, West Virginia does not like Obama.

Do you have a populist in your pocket? These are the voters Hannah Arendt identified as the politically unaffiliated, the Hitler voters. But to pander to them we lose our core values. They are the white grievance class. Political consciousness needs to be taught not pandering

The only appearances John's recipe made in our news coverage was when we quoted President Obama's Dec. 2016 criticism of media coverage of the e-mails. Again, I think we set ourselves a pretty high bar for which e-mails we would report on.

Sadly, I'd bet Nick isn't kidding - he & too many of his colleagues, especially @nytimes, really have that little self-awareness of their failures during the 2016 election, & can't accept their roles in the installation of a totalitarian-leaning Russian puppet as POTUS.

Paul Surovell @paulsurovell · 22 Apr 2018

The argument you are promoting is that truth-seeking journalism is a tool of Russian intelligence. And the implication is that Americans who question the Russiagate narrative are tools of Russian intelligence. I can't think of better examples of mind controlling McCarthyism.

That's drivel. I alongside the NYT am saying that when Russians steal information from Americans, if you don't make that point high up in your story you're doing their work for them. That's not McCarthyism. That's the opposite. It's defending our democracy from foreign attack.

This is a long thread to justify your role as a "de facto instrument of Russian intelligence." Don't take my word for it thought. Those are the words of your paper.

one reason for Mr. Trump's election, Mr. Assange seemed happy to take credit. "Americans extensively engaged with our publications," he wrote. "According to Facebook statistics WikiLeaks was the most referenced political topic during October."

Though Mr. Assange did not say so, WikiLeaks' best defense may be the conduct of the mainstream American media. Every major publication, including The Times, published multiple stories citing the D.N.C. and Podesta emails posted by WikiLeaks, becoming a de facto instrument of Russian intelligence.

Mr. Putin, a student of martial arts, had turned two institutions at the core of American democracy — political campaigns and

A note to reporters: How is the mere fact that Trump talked to Comey by himself during the Russia investigation not far, far worse than Bill Clinton talking to Lynch? Someone explain that to me.

If Lynch was trying to influence the investigation she did a piss poor job at it. She let her subordinate (Comey) take on some of her duties as AG to the point of not knowing Comey would do the 06/2016 PC, which was her job, until minutes before he spoke. That's some influence. 😒

I think there is a bit of a gray area here. Sometimes its better to let someone just say things and not interject. If he did, Trump may have clammed up. Sometimes my job requires this. If you want more information, you don't always reprimand someone in the moment.

LT @LateTweeter · 19 Apr 2018

I 100% agree with you. From the very beginning, Comey was uncomfortable with Trump & knew he was liar. It's possibly a situation where he felt the less he said, the better.

Also, consider if Trump taped his conversations & then leaked EDITED versions. Totally plausible.

Really honored to moderate a great discussion on the GOP tax scam on tax day with two heros for social justice @AdyBarkan and Rev Flippin. They made the point that this bill does almost nothing for Georgia families while giving away the store to the super rich.

It's cute how some people still think of Fox News as a media outlet and not an organ of propaganda for the state regime

Jill Geisler @JillGeisler
The Sean Hannity disclosure raises serious questions for Fox News. What ethical expectations does the network have for its opinion show hosts? Are they expected to reveal conflicts of interest? If not, why not? How are viewers served by lack of transparency?

Idea that challengers shouldn't get media exposure unless they buy paid exposure first is what fuels money-driven politics.

My sense of what's happening is that the health care and tax bill were particularly unpopular, esp with non college women, and those are out of the headlines. So from now until Election Day remind your friends and neighbors how GOP voted on both. The ads will be on this in fall.

Yeesh, even Schoen and Caddell would be shocked at Mark Penn's deep dive in wingnuttery.

They were among the most powerful men of the last decade. They commanded armies of armed agents, had the ability to bug and wiretap almost anyone, and had virtually unlimited budgets. They were the leadership of the FBI, the CIA and the director of national intelligence under President Obama. Each day, it becomes clearer that they are the real abusers of power in this drama.

The book by former FBI Director James Comey and the daily hyperbolic John Brennan sound bites are perhaps the final reveal of just how much hubris and vitriol they had. Comey's book, according to reports, contains nothing new of legal consequence to Trump (while suggesting that former Attorney General Loretta Lynch has something to worry about), but it unmasks the hatred that Comey had for Donald Trump from the beginning. It impeaches Comey's fitness to have ever held high, nonpartisan office.

Whether you are a Democrat who can't stand Trump, a Hillary Clinton supporter who feels robbed by Comey, or a Trump supporter, any use of wiretapping and vast prosecutorial machinery against our political campaigns and sitting presidents always has to be viewed skeptically and

The perceptions of the right are the only ones that mattered to Comey and that is what is dangerous about driving your actions based on perceptions and not rules. And karma really delivered the punch to Comey. He helped elect the guy who'd fire him - to obstruct Justice.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden
What's odd is he cared about the perception of the Lynch-WJC meeting. But when it comes to dumping the email story 11 Days before the election contra DOJ rules- then he's not concerned about perception he's tampering w the election. In some ways Comey is like a stereotypical political pundit in that he's way more concerned with "optics" and perceptions than the underlying facts of the situation.

Comey truly does not seem to get that his job was to go by the book and then be willing to absorb the heat from the partisans, not to conduct his own assessment of the political landscape and then try to transcend the partisans.

I think about that first Comey intrusion into 2016—a hyperbolic condemnation of Hillary while exonerating simultaneously. We've lost memory and insight into the entire email thing that should have never grown to the level it did. It was politics, not oversight.

That is accurate & Comey's inability to do that cost HRC (and the country!) the election. However like in kindergarten "one of these things [illegible] not like the other". To me there is simply no comparison between the ego that allowed Comey's flawed decision & Trump's megalomania.

I imagined a lot of things of a Trump presidency but a defense of lawyers wasn't one of them.

> Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump

[redacted] Comey's decision to release the letter on Oct. 28 was influenced by his Interpretation of the polls, that really ought to cut against his image as an honorable, principled decision-maker. Instead, he was just being expedient and trying to save his own hide.

1. Obstruction 18 U.S.C. § 1503
—United States v. Aguilar—suggests that any potentially obstructive acts must be directed at a pending "proceeding," normally a grand jury or judicial proceeding
2. Mueller would have to show (1) there was a pending grand jury, (2) the president knew about the grand jury, & that even if the president tried to thwart the FBI investigation (3) his action was directed at the grand jury proceedings & (4) likely to affect those proceedings.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden

This is not the standard. Stop gaslighting. You can instruct justice by lying to the police before a grand jury is impaneled.

Neera, his own words are best I can offer. They are not completely satisfying. On Trump, the investigation was not yet public and probably not far enough along yet. He had previously announced Hillary file closed. Then it reopened. He felt boxed in.

> As for his controversial disclosure on Oct. 28, 2016, 11 days before the election, that the F.B.I. was reviewing more Clinton emails that might be pertinent to its earlier investigation, Comey notes here that he had assumed from media polling that Clinton was going to win. He has repeatedly asked himself, he writes, whether he was influenced by that assumption: "It is entirely possible that, because I was making decisions in an environment where Hillary Clinton was sure to be the next president, my concern about making her an illegitimate president by concealing the restarted investigation bore greater weight than it would have if the election appeared closer or if Donald Trump were ahead in all polls. But I don't know."

I have no trouble believing it, because Comey did what he thought was right. Had he not, and Trump lost, faith in the FBI as an unbiased arbiter of the law would have dropped. Obama had the decency to know Comey had no easy option.

This is described as part of a broader series of post-election vignettes where Comey visits prominent Democrats who, with tears in their eyes, absolve and embrace him.

Remember this forever. When the Constitution buckles in the face of Trumpism, it's because McConnell and Ryan are the ones trying to undermine it

Manu Raju @mkraju
Booker-Graham and Coons-Tillis expected tomorrow to introduce a combined version of their two competing bills to protect the special counsel. But unless GOP leadership agrees to take it up, it's not going to move. And so far, there's no appetite among GOP on Hill.

The way mass protests have radically altered politics is through mass protests that engulf the Capitol. See e.g. corruption in South Korea. That is a model for us.

It was Maggie Haberman (and some other NYT reporter who's not as front-facing).

They handed this "Red Line" to Trump. Fed it to him, in fact. You can find it on your own, but DM me if you want the transcript now.

Also, Pence is already President. We know Trump spends hours every day watching TV and plays golf all weekend. Who do we think is running things? Pence is a shadow president. And he's not accountable for his actions. I say make it official and hold him accountable.

I like how you've set up a system in which when your preferred candidate loses, it's the system's fault. But when your preferred candidate wins, the people have spoken.

I'm all for that. And appreciate his work to do that. But perhaps there's space for some discussion of the recent successes in organizing everywhere. Like rural PA and Alabama with real wins. When we organize everywhere and win, isn't that something to point to?

That is exactly the point. The point is the bad party was doing wrong in the past (I think we agree) now we are moving forward and winning. Hence an event with a rising star in a state most would classify as deep red

Well I think the right vilified obama and that is part of what happened in the country over the 8 yrs. But we certainly agree on a 50 state strategy. And as such maybe he could also discuss recent successes in the future. These are victories from pursuing his goal.

It;s one quote about how there wasn't success in elections. People like hearing hard truths because then they trust when you say what's going right and how we organize to win. It's also the context of Jackson, MS and Lumumba.

But not the relevant info, Harry. Since the date that Trump's desire to target Amazon first reported, Amazon is down 7% of value. Nasdaq as a whole, 70 points or 1%. I don't know you keep digging. China is already yours.

As I said yesterday on @thelastword, Trump's promises to build the wall were rendered impotent by GOP in Congress and this will hurt him with his base. (hi @AnnCoulter). So he's going to rant on this for a long time.

Tonight's results show we are at risk of a #BlueWave in WI. The Far Left is driven by anger & hatred -- we must counter it with optimism & organization. Let's share our positive story with voters & win in November.

G. Elliott Morris @gelliottmorris

Projection: Liberal candidate Rebecca Dallet will win the Wisconsin supreme court election, likely by mid double digits. The court's conservative majority will shrink from 5–2 to 4–3. Democrats are 3-for-3 in elections (both special and normal) this evening.

But in the case of a political ad, the product is the political agenda itself.

So if you're pushing an opposite political agenda to Sinclair's, paying them for the ad block is a lot more defensible, and useful, than if you were selling a commercial product.

Here's the problem, @MikeLevinCA. Commercial ads and political ads serve very different purposes. A commercial ad is an endorsement of what you're sponsoring, in return for business. A political ad is the opposite: an endorsement of yourself, that the sponsoree allows for money.

I don't see how this could possibly hold up under basic contract law. Liquidated damages aren't enforceable if they're punitive, as where, e.g., they lack any proportionality to the amount of harm caused by the breach.

What always irritated me was how people, mostly men, would always criticize her speeches. These are the same people who don't criticize a Trump speech. There's a reason she was paid for them. They were good. It was a jealous male myth.

Or you could just not attack a teenager who survived a mass shooting.

Matt Walsh @MattWalshBlog
The Laura Ingraham situation shows why you should be very careful about apologizing to the Left. Even if you were wrong. Their demands for an apology are insincere. They demand the apology because they want you to submit to them, not because they want to forgive.

Not even remotely a level playing field, @MattWalshBlog. Ridiculing a teenager on nat'l news is just wrong. Add to that his recent survival of a mass shooting and it becomes foul. Qualifying an apology with reference to Holy Week is even worse. I can't unhear that.

Yes. For both Manafort and Trump. You have a right not to incriminate yourself, but not to cover for someone else. Manafort is assuming a worse legal position purposefully to cover for Trump in the hope of a pardon. Trump's dangle of a pardon to avoid liability is also OOJ.

We can move his case into state, whereby pardon has no bearing, so let them keep playing their corrupt games as they probably did in private life. This is different.

In the end, the hashtag says it best: It's #MarchForOURLives, which denotes the self-interest at play.

If people who have health insurance were to march for universal healthcare, it would be altruism; ie #MarchForTHEIRLives

Self-interest, as always, is the problem here.

I completely agree that change truly happens through social movements. I just think some social movements are driven by liberal goals- equal rights or as in yesterday, guns, not always left economics. Though of course that was an animating goal of progressive movement.

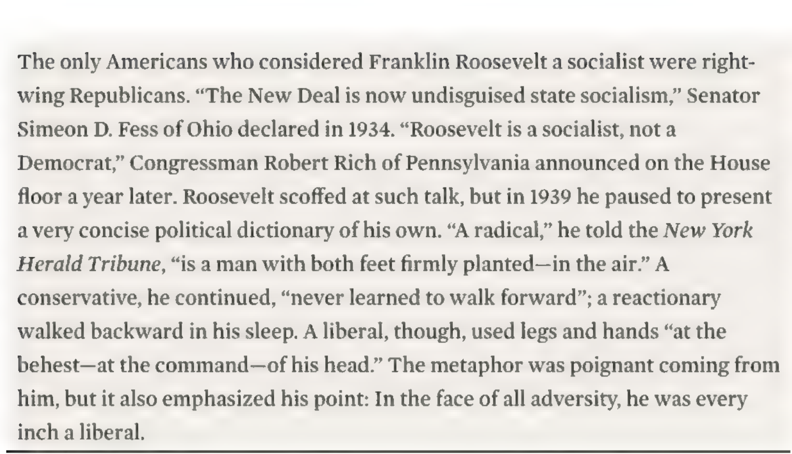
   FDR was a liberal, not a socialist. Sean Wilentz dismantles the revisionism: https://democracyjournal.org/magazine/48/fighting-words/ …pic.twitter.com/n9Gzi16z50



The only Americans who considered Franklin Roosevelt a socialist were right-wing Republicans. "The New Deal is now undisguised state socialism," Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio declared in 1934. "Roosevelt is a socialist, not a Democrat," Congressman Robert Rich of Pennsylvania announced on the House floor a year later. Roosevelt scoffed at such talk, but in 1939 he paused to present a very concise political dictionary of his own. "A radical," he told the New York Herald Tribune, "is a man with both feet firmly planted—in the air." A conservative, he continued, "never learned to walk forward"; a reactionary walked backward in his sleep. A liberal, though, used legs and hands "at the behest—at the command—of his head." The metaphor was poignant coming from him, but it also emphasized his point: In the face of all adversity, he was every inch a liberal.

1) Like most popular insurgencies, both big demos included leftists and liberals (and others). But their dynamic was to compel pols to embrace positions -- on gender and on guns – identified with and advanced by social movements.

That's the proof right here, you won't even endorse an increase in the minimum wage right now!

You are still fighting against the economic 💵 of Rights, right here in these tweets.

the difference between liberal economics and socialist economics is not 'whether the President self-identified as a socialist', it's actually a question of policy for example, fdr's economic bill of rights, a socialist policy document that modern liberals oppose

CAP came to all that stuff much later than others, and then it was a more watered down version of what others were pushing.

As a general rule, CAP serves to put the brakes on progressive advocacy, which others in the NGO space are well aware of.

It's possible they are communicating to the White House directly. But honestly I don't think any of us can rely on the GOP putting country before party.

Maggie Haberman @maggieNYT
Trump has always seen what he can get away with, and when there are no lasting consequences, he presses on further. Right now, he's testing what Hill Rs will let him get away with re Mueller. And so far there's silence from leadership.

What about lying to the American people about weapons of mass destruction? War before honesty. Is that a Great Slogan?

This white woman has a lot of nerve. That's all I will say.

I'm proud of the work that I do. I'm proud of the journey that got me here.

The ongoing effort to make me feel badly about myself, my work and my journey hasn't worked for the past [illegible] years and it's not gonna work now.

This article on how a community no longer cares about the deportation of a law-abiding restaurant owner is angering and depressing. It can happen here.

Verizon 7:28 AM 86%
The Washington Post (WP Company LLC)

O'Brady's, where families were starting to pile in for trivia night. In the evening, as the host pitched questions about which country invented the bobsled and what state is the birthplace of the Star Spangled Banner, Banfi walked to the soda fountain and filled a red glass with iced tea.

It belonged to Matheny, one of the regulars at Eddie's. He couldn't bring himself to go back either. But his fury over Trump's decision has subsided. Immigration, he said, was a theoretical issue. What he sees around him each day is a stronger country

I don't know who @bourgeoisalien is, but she randomly harassed me, and now she's blocked. I usually don't recommend blocks, but I skimmed her timeline and it's pretty toxic. She's supposedly a comedienne, but her schtick is harassment, and that's never funny.

Cuomo is on the right track asking the tough questions. Where he derails is in letting people like Ted Cruz refuse to answer and filibuster instead. Cruz shouldn't have been able to utter another word until he revealed his "source" on gun laws and their effects on crime.

This is becoming old hat isn't it? Maybe they started an investigation because your son met with Russians to collect dirt on Hillary.

Miller subpoenas got someone's notice this morning.

> Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump
> Why did the Obama Administration start an investigation into the Trump Campaign (with zero proof of wrongdoing) long before the Election in November? Wanted to discredit so Crooked H would win. Unprecedented. Bigger than Watergate! Plus, Obama did NOTHING about Russian meddling.

I disagree. They can make it an issue because people are defending anti-Semitism. If everyone condemned it, including Women's March leaders, it would last a nano second. It lives on because they won't. But I agree that those accept anti-Semitism don't speak for the Resistance.

I disagree. They can make it an issue because people are defending anti-Semitism. If everyone condemned it, including Women's March leaders, it would last a nano second. It lives on because they won't. But I agree that those accept anti-Semitism don't speak for the Resistance.

The Special Counsel report will name all its sources. It will not rely on anonymous sources. I understand need for them in reporting. I just think when there's so much lying, reporters are asking us to rely on their judgement that they aren't being lied to. And that's not easy.

I'll believe those polls when we see actual results. It's true we've been winning lately, but it's also true that we are not in charge of the government at any level, and I believe that's because we need to do more to motivate our voters.

I say this with great respect but I don't understand your unwillingness to see the hard work and yes success of the Resistance in election after election this past year. And this 1000 seat loss - after the last year - has become an anti-Obama narrative that seems divisive.

Of course I applaud these successes, but it's also true that many of the candidates who have won do not fit the top-down narrative of who the real "Washington insiders" think will win. I am a proud Resister & proud proponent of Pres Obama's inclusive politics.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 1 Mar 2018

True. That's another reason to applaud their success. Not state the 1000 seat loss narrative that is both now stale and an inherent criticism of Pres Obama's leadership of the Democratic Party. I appreciate your willingness to listen.

I support unions, but their primary function is to be a check against the profit motive. The public sector has no such motive, so public sector unions wind up being a check against the will of the voters, which seems wrong. Willing to be convinced otherwise though.

If you go with the axiom that people who would work for Trump are not good people, you can't really go wrong. There's basically one exception to this rule and hopefully he keeps us away from a nuclear war.

Perry Bacon Jr. @perrybaconjr
A lot of political journalists, myself included, implied last summer that John Kelly was a "non-ideological" figure who would reshape the Trump White House as chief of staff. How did we get it so wrong? I explored that here. fivethirtyeight.com/features/how-t...

Yes but those Podesta emails pretty much made clear her view: Dodd-Frank was as far as she'd go. I think she'd have made a good POTUS, despite not really liking much of her policies.

I have to say, she would've been a good pal to Street

This is twitter, Neera, not a formal investigation.Those emails sure captured her final position: opposed to glass-steagall, pro dodd-frank,willing to take action "if necessary" but to keep ~ status quo for now.

Also: total shit show on speeches. Not your fault but man, disaster

Vicki Bryan's Bond Angle @VickiBryanBondA · 19 Feb 2018

So her stolen emails add only truncated discussions to the mix by someone who notably preferred personal face to face vs email, which comprised a narrow view at best of her work vs outweighing everything she said
& btw, her speeches actually were great when witnesses in entirety

I'm trying to imagine being the person who listens to these kids and thinks to himself, "my coverage isn't nuanced enough to capture that I'm only mostly in the pocket of the NRA"

Marco Rubio @marcorubio
also hear how media again tries to inflame by falsely claiming I said "more guns laws won't do anything" Real quote? "more gun laws ALONE" twitter.com/facethenation/…

Yeah. We were busy watching the DNC do everything their owner, Hillary Clinton, said.

THEY were perfectly in sync during the campaign. You just can not help carrying water for her and trying to blame that activity on others.

I don't want to relitigate the primary, but if you look at the actual facts, not twitter memes, the evidence is that Russia did a lot more to help Bernie than the DNC's internal emails did to help Hillary. Maybe you can get off the tp's now.

The evidence is: Hillary manipulated the primary so she would run against a pied piper candidate, not realizing the people wanted someone to actually represent them.

When Trump started saying things people wanted to hear, like JOBS, they listened.

Bernie's plan was jobs.

I don't agree with @ConorLambPA on every issue, but he's running as a citizen servant and we need a lot more of that in our politics - it's the true antidote to the current mess. Please chip in a few bucks; he's getting outspent 17 to 1. Nice article here

I know facts are hard. Obama tried to do something - he sanctioned the Russians. You've done zero. And you've willfully not sanctioned even though congress passed sanctions. Stop gaslighting.

Very sad that the FBI missed all of the many signals sent out by the Florida school shooter. This is not acceptable. They are spending too much time trying to prove Russian collusion with the Trump campaign - there is no collusion. Get back to the basics and make us all proud!

The DNC was a bankrupt shell. Sanders ran a good campaign, but he lost and it wasn't particularly close. But what is not recognized is that Sanders successfully moved the party to the left. The platform was the most progressive in history.

I was a Bernie voter who supported HRC (always intended to support the nominee). As a "soft" HRC supporter, it is abundantly clear to me how I was affected. Every time I began to feel enthusiasm, I was hesitant to share it. There was a real "depression" effect.

Once HRC was the nominee, I began to learn about her. To really pay attention to who she was. And, yes, I started to feel very enthusiastic about her. (Even more so now). But, every time I began to share this enthusiasm, I could feel the familiar tropes of backlash.

Hats off to James Risen and @theIntercept for their honesty and courage in discussing their role and others in partaking in a Russian disinformation campaign. I have been critical in the past but here @theintercept does far more than other news orgs. Bravo anti-Clinton lies dressed up to look like news.

To their disgrace, editors and reporters at American news organizations greatly enhanced the Russian echo chamber, eagerly writing stories about Clinton and the Democratic Party based on the emails, while showing almost no interest during the presidential campaign in exactly how those emails came to be disclosed and distributed. The Intercept itself has faced such accusations. The hack was a much more important story

The conference with the GOP House bill would have been a disaster. Seems a little odd to think the senate bill would become law.

The situation was fluid. It's certainly unclear what a conference would look like, especially if it was Goodlatte's bill. A dramatic and clear vote from the Senate could have moved either Ryan or the WH or both. It was weakness.

The bipartisan legislation represents genuine concessions on both sides in a R majority under a 'difficult' (generous term, yes) President. It could have reimposed the division of powers by showing the will of the Senate on behalf of the DACA kids.

I disagree. I am a registered Democrat but I am tired of the unwillingness of both parties to compromise. To protect dreamers, it would have been worth it to give Trump a "win" on the Wall. In all likelihood, Trump will use money to build a demo wall and call it a day.

Neera. DCCC investment is not sufficient! Only 225K vs 1.5 million from the GOP!

$224,000 over two weeks. Planned Parenthood has yet to announce any election efforts on Lamb's behalf. And Lamb's fundraising has stayed firmly in the realm of the terrestrial. Daily Kos readers have so far raised $51,000 for the first-time candidate—a notable boost in a normal race but a little more than one-tenth of what it raised for Ossoff in a seven-day period last winter.

The different approach to the Pennsylvania special election reflects the growth of local progressive organizing of the last eight months, as well as the increasingly cluttered electoral calendar.
